Schlam Officially Certified as a 'Great Place to Work'!

PERTH: There were celebrations aplenty at Schlam this week with the company recently being certified as a Great Place to Work®. This came just six months after the mining services company was proudly awarded the RISE Western Australian Employer of the Year.

Great Place to Work® is a global recognition program where companies are evaluated based on a rigorous methodology and validated employee feedback. The certification process includes a research-backed employee survey and a review of company culture and programs.

The program uses information gained from 30 years of data science and 100 million completed employee surveys to measure the performance of companies through the certification process.

Executive Chair and Group CEO, David Haslett, praised the Schlam team for their recent achievement.

“We have an amazing team that embraces a strong cultural ideology, centred on creating exceptional experiences, for those who rely on us,” said David. “Our regular Team Member surveys show that Schlam is a ‘great place to work’. Now we have the certification to back it.”

Schlam joins a list of leading and respected companies across Australia and New Zealand recognised with the Great Place to Work® certification.

“The ‘Great Place to Work’ certification is a result of the continuous effort and energy we invest in our people and culture,” said David. “We attract and recruit the best people, and our staff turnover is low. People love working at Schlam. We’re a team that’s committed, dedicated and passionate, that also celebrates its wins.”

Since the announcement of the certification, the Schlam team have celebrated with commemorative cookies, lunches and even surprise visits from an ice cream van.
